Andrew Papadopoulos is no stranger to the CAMS Board, having served as a Director almost continuously since 2001, including fulfilling the position of Vice President immediately prior to being elected as President.

His list of roles and responsibilities is impressive. He is the Chairman of the Audit and Finance Committee and was Vice President of the Australian Racing Drivers Club and a founding member of the Australian Institute for Motor Sport Safety. He was instrumental in the establishment of the National Club Development Committee and sits on this committee given his interest in sport and club development. In addition, he has been honoured as a Life Member of the Alfa Romeo Owners Club of Australia.

Andrew has been involved in motor sport for more than thirty years. He has been a competitor in classic rallying and currently competes in his Alfa sports sedan.

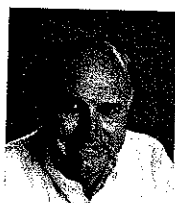

The Papadopoulos family has extensive involvement in motor sport, with Andrew's wife Janice an organiser and senior official, son Mark a fellow Sports Sedans competitor and son Christopher an engineer with the Renault F1 Team in the United Kingdom.

Andrew also brings extensive commercial and business knowledge to the Presidency, working in marketing in London and the public sector in Sydney before establishing his own pallet manufacturing, recycling, repairing and marketing firm, which is now in its 24th year of operation.

Andrew aims to lead CAMS into a more cost-effective and user-friendly organisation for all levels of motor sport. He fully embraces the renewed focus on sport and club development, engagement with key stakeholders, the continual pursuit to increase customer service and the establishment of a more viable and sustainable organisation for the future.

"We have some major challenges facing our organisation but with our focus on service delivery and consultation with our stakeholders and members I am looking forward to leading our organisation into a confident future."
